Overview:

In the evolving era of complicated technology, research, artificial intelligence and complex care processes, hospitals are in a continuous struggle to cope with the evolving healthcare demands and meet patients' needs. Yet, patients are not usual business customers and care services are not sale products. Health is a delicate blessing that patients are more concerned to preserve than healthcare providers are. Thus, Al-Rassoul Al-Azam hospital, represented by its Nursing Administration, chose to highlight in its 7th annual nursing conference the practice values that are of true meaning for our patients.

As patients' advocates, nurses play a vital role in assessing and addressing patients' concerns and stand in solidarity with them to ensure that all their rights are being delivered to them. The conference shall address the individualistic humanitarian concerns that patients hold in parallel with the holistic nursing services that are required from our nurses to improve patients' experiences and fulfill their expectations.

Objectives:

At the end of this conference, the participants shall be able to:

1. Describe nursing leadership efforts to strengthen nurses' knowledge, skills and attitude for delivering person-centered care
2. Discuss the different nursing approaches to assess and address patient's values and preferences.
3. Present patient engagement techniques for different patient population
